Footnote 1

The numbers presented in this table are based on the population of eligible electors, as opposed to the population of registered electors that is used to calculate the official voting results. Using the population of eligible electors enables us to compare participation rates over time and across age groups.

Footnote 2

First time: voters who turned 18 since the last election and are eligible to vote for the first time. Not first time: voters between 18 and 24 years old who were eligible to vote in the previous election.

Data sources

Up to the 2015 general election, Elections Canada used administrative data from the electoral process to obtain a random sample of electors who voted, and linked them to the National Register of Electors to produce estimates of voter turnout by age and sex. Confidence intervals were calculated to express the precision of the estimates with the following interpretation: If the sampling was repeated many times, the estimates produced in about 95% of cases would be within two standard errors of the census value, which is the value that would have been obtained if a census had been conducted instead of a sample survey.

Changes to the Canada Elections Act under Bill C-76 require Elections Canada to prepare a compilation of all data of electors who voted on polling day and make that data available to political parties in electronic format. This legislative amendment enabled Elections Canada, for the 2019 election, to use a comprehensive set of data to produce these estimates without having to resort to sampling. Processing and response errors still exist, but they are negligible compared to sampling errors.
