ACPP Meeting Summary

Overview

On August 5, 2021, Elections Canada (EC) held a special pre-General Election (GE) meeting to inform members of the Advisory Committee of Political Parties (ACPP) on a number of decisions made on approaches to the upcoming election happening in a pandemic context. EC offered presentations on four topics, followed by opportunities for members to ask questions of clarification. The four topics addressed at this meeting were Vote-by-Mail, Online Registration, the Political Entities Service Centre (PESC) and the Nomination Process for candidates and Vote Counting and Results Reporting.

Vote-by-Mail Presentation

Presenter: Jean-Marc Collin, the Associate Director for Outreach and External Relations and Alternative Voting Methods

Mr. Collin stated that the purpose of this presentation was to explain some of the important operational decisions that have been taken and highlight their potential impacts for political parties as well as for candidates.

He reminded ACPP members that all electors, including locals, were now able to apply online to vote by mail, specifying that a local elector is one who submits their application while in their electoral district. Mr. Collin indicated that, previously, these voters had to download and print a paper application form and send it to their local EC office. Mr. Collin highlighted that the prioritisation of Vote-by-Mail services was largely driven by polls conducted, estimating that between 4 and 5 million electors could choose to vote by mail in a pandemic context. In comparison, during the 2019 GE, only 5,000 local voters voted by mail.

Mr. Collin then reviewed the vote-by-mail journey, from the elector using the online voter registration service on the EC website to the counting process.

Mr. Collin fielded questions from participants about the Vote-by-Mail journey focused on clarifying the process.

Online Registration Presentation

Presenters: Brenda Sandelin, Manager, National Voter Registration Projects and Electoral Readiness and Jean-François Lefebvre, Assistant Manager, National Voter Registration Projects and Electoral Readiness

This session offered participants some key information on EC's List of Electors and the Online Voter Registration Services. The presenters first indicated that, as of August 1, 2021, the list of electors' quality remained high and above key targets. They then pointed out that, to assist registered and eligible political parties in conducting electoral affairs, the lists of electors that candidates and political parties are entitled to obtain are provided through Elections Canada's online portal for candidates, the Political Entities Service Centre (PESC). The presenters specified that preliminary versions of the Lists of Electors are provided as soon as possible after the issuance of the writ, then updated lists are provided at key dates during the electoral calendar. An electronic copy of these various lists would be provided to candidates for their electoral district and to registered political parties for the electoral districts in which they endorsed a candidate.

In the second portion of this session, presenters spoke about the Online Voter Registration Services available to electors. They explained that this system could be used by an elector until 6 days before election day to check if they are registered to vote, update the address on their voter registration, register to vote, and apply to vote by mail. Presenters followed by indicating that, after the close of the revision period, electors could use the Online Voter Registration Service to download and print a pre-filled Registration Certificate, which they could bring to the polling site on polling day to complete their registration. Electors could register online by uploading their proof of identity and address.

Finally, the presenters announced that, in order to help electors who wish to apply to vote by mail, but who live at a non-standard address type (e.g. without a house or building number and that do not include street or road information) a point on map feature has been added to EC's online service to allow these electors to place a pin on a map indicating where their residence is located. This enables EC to assign their registration and/or vote to the appropriate electoral district. The electors that registering to vote by mail, would then need to provide a mailing address where they can receive their ballot kit.

Political Entities Service Centre (PESC) and the Nomination Process Presentation

Presenter: Christopher Morris, Chief of Candidate Services and Alexandre MacIsaac, Chief of PESN.

The presenters of this session briefly covered the candidate nomination process and related services. They began by providing an overview of how the Canada Elections Act (CEA) outlines the candidate endorsement process, information which is outlined on the Elections Canada website. The presenters followed by reviewing The Political Entities Service Centre (PESC) tool, explaining that it is Elections Canada's secure online portal designed to provide quick access to a variety of services and digital documents. They reminded participants that PESC allows candidate campaigns to complete and submit the nomination package online, access useful electoral materials and submit financial documents after the election. They also highlighted how Political Entities can create an account at any time (there's no need to wait for an election to be called) and submit their nomination shortly after the issue of the writ.

Given the pandemic circumstances across the country, the presenters then encouraged all candidates to submit their nominations through the Political Entities Service Centre portal (PESC), indicating that it provides a streamlined process for completing the nomination form and for submitting information to the returning office, while helping reduce interactions at the RO office and increasing safety for the office, visitors, and candidates. They clarified that in person submissions would still be accepted with scheduled appointments, but that those going into the RO offices would be required to adhere to COVID related provisions.

Further pandemic-related accommodations were explained, including EC's offer to allow candidate's solemn declarations to be completed by videoconference with their returning officer. Instructions were provided on what options existed to submit the elector signatures form, as outlined in the COVID-19 Guidance for Candidates Collecting Elector Signatures document.

The presenters reminded participants of the critical role played by candidate representatives in observing the voting operations, validating outer envelopes and in counting of regular and special ballots. With these roles in mind, EC urged participants to respect of provincial public health authorities' guidelines and indicated that masks are required when attending polling locations. The presenters pointed to addendums to guidelines for candidate representatives that were available, such as Additional guidelines for observing ordinary and advance polls, Guidelines for observing special ballot voting and guidelines for observing the counting at the Special Voting Rules Administrator's office.

In addition, the presenters announced that, for the first time, ROs would be looking to arrange joint meetings with confirmed candidates through a variety of methods to convey the latest information and adaptive measures.

The sessions' presenters then announced that EC issued an interpretation note on Canvassing and Campaigning and in Residential Areas and Public Places to address the question: What are some of the limits on the candidates' right to canvass and campaign in public places and residential areas? While the focus of the answer was broader than questions related to the pandemic context, the presenters underlined the limits to this right in relation to the protection of the health and safety of electors. An example provided was that a person in control of a multiple-residence building or public place may invoke an exception and deny access if the exception is justified based on all the facts of the particular situation.

Finally, before opening the floor to questions, EC reminded everyone that the Political Entities Support Network was available to support candidates and parties during the election and shared their contact information.

Vote Counting and Results Reporting Presentation

Presenter: Dawn Borutskie, Associate Director, Voting

Ms. Borutskie began her presentation by explaining the process on counting ballots and reporting results that would be largely staying the same, with the exception of a few changes. EC's plan was outlined in order to ensure safe counting during the pandemic. She pointed out that the addendums to the Guidelines for Candidate Representatives were featured on the EC website. She also shared EC's Safeguards for Counting Votes and Reporting on Results policy.

Ms. Borutskie indicated that EC was anticipating much higher numbers of special ballots in Ottawa and in each RO office. She reviewed the rules and respective roles tied to counting at advance and ordinary polls.

Further, the presenter outlined how counting should take place at EC's counting centre in Ottawa. The most significant change highlighted in this process was that political parties could send observers. However, it was cautioned that due to the pandemic, additional restrictions could apply, such as maintaining physical distancing, needing to respect capacity limits and so on.

Ms. Borutskie also outlined information that is indicated in the Guidelines for Observing Special Ballot Voting Operations and Special Ballot Verification and Counting at Returning Offices.

Finally, regarding reporting results, Ms. Borutskie reminded participants of EC's regular practices for counting processes and validation of results on election night.
